

Curriculum Vitae Bernardino Fantini

Bernardino Fantini is Honorary Professor of History of Medicine and Health, Faculty of Medicine, University of Geneva. After a PhD in biochemistry in Rome in 1974, he has got a PhD in History and Philosophy of Life Sciences at the EPHE-Sorbonne, Paris, in 1992.

Full Professor of the History of Medicine and Health at the University of Geneva from 1992 to 2013; Director of the WHO Collaborating Centre for the Historical Research on Public Health, from 2005 to 2013.

His main research Subject are the History of epidemics and of the social and cultural reactions to them; History and epistemology of biological and medical sciences; History of social, geographical, and cultural determinants of diseases and health; Relationships between medicine, science and music.